If you research the question about which books were the most significant for the generation born in early 1990s, the answer would probably be predictable: the Harry Potter series and "The Lord of the Rings." Of course, there were other popular franchises, such as "Dune" by Frank Herbert, or "The Wheel of Time" by Robert Jordan, but they did not have the significance in the minds of teenagers in the 1990s. And probably, it was Harry Potter who managed to become more commercially successful and loved by a wider audience—"The Lord of the Rings" was sometimes too epic and too dark to become popular among children.

Another reason why the Harry Potter franchise became so significant was probably because Harry was the same age as J.K. Rowling's main audience: children. The young sorcerer was only 11 years old when he first arrived at Hogwarts, and so were the boys and girls who followed his adventures. This provided the author with a unique opportunity to make her character become mature together with the audience—so whatever happened to Harry and his friends, it remained realistic and important for fans.

Despite all this, the Harry Potter franchise can boast of other advantages as well. An interesting story is one of them. It all starts in a rather trivial way though—with a boy being branded as the "unique one," a survivor of a terrible assault with a destiny to defeat an evil overlord. However, this is the basic layer of the story, so to say. Getting older, developing relationships, studying. Rowling describes all these events, important in the life of any teenager, in an exciting setting full of magic and wonders—and manages to do so like no other. Magic in her books is something daily, habitual—and it makes it even more wonderful.

Rowling created truly vivid characters; however, not all of them revealed their potential from the very beginning. Surprisingly, the one who truly took his time before finally showing his personality was Harry. Whereas Ron, Hermione, Draco, Snape, and other characters possessed vivid and readable personalities from the very beginning, for a long time, Harry remains some kind of an "event-trigger," whose main goal is to move the story forward. Either something happens to Harry, or he does something on his own—and this allows the author to move one step further. It does not mean Harry's character is

The Persuasive Essay

The purpose of a persuasive essay is to convince the reader to think or act a certain way. A good persuasive essay must have a strong, clearly stated thesis and a logical line of reasoning that the reader can follow. Although similar to other forms of the essay, the persuasive essay also contains the following:

• An emotional appeal

Most writers of persuasive essays use emotion to get the readers to feel strongly about their argument.

• Opposing Argument(s)

Writers, who anticipate, confront and refute opposing arguments, show their readers that they are knowledgeable about the other side of the issue. A line of argument answers critics in advance. By answering objections in advance, these writers strengthen their own position.

• Arguments presented in a logical or climactic order

Persuasive essays can be organized in a number of different ways, but many writers present their arguments in a logical progression, often in the order of importance, saving the most important point for last.

Tone

Apart from the substance and the argument itself, the tone is the single most important means through which you establish your credibility. It is through tone that you convey your attitude towards the issue and the audience. The tone may be objective, satirical, solemn or angry.

Tone is even more crucial in persuasion than it is in argumentation. Facts and logic may be enough to convince one of the validity of an argument, but they do not inevitably move one to certain action. It is through tone that you make your audience feel that something is right, not only for you, but also for them.

The Persuasive Essay Outline

The persuasive essay may be written in both informal and formal methods. Your method depends on the topic and audience. Logic is a key in this writing. In the formal persuasive essay, the use of third person, present tense and stylized diction and syntax are given. It is the creative use of conclusions, and careful undermining of opposing arguments which make this essay style stand apart from the simple literary essay.

The key to success in this essay style is the wise use of diction and writing devices, which appeal to the emotion of the reader, and sway the reader to the opinion which the writer is presenting.

Introduction: The introduction brings the topic into focus and provides an emotional appeal to bring the reader to the author's perspective. The thesis provides a clear, concise explanation of the topic or issue, and the writer's opinion. There should also be some suggestion of how the essay will be supported.
